

The stigma around mental illness prevents people from seeking the help they need. When you fight that perception, you not only become an ally, you help people in need feel more comfortable seeking care.

Here are some tips for being an ally:

- Talk openly about mental health: Use your own experience (if you feel comfortable) or discuss news items to foster open dialogue.
- Educate yourself and others: Let others who make jokes or insults about mental illness know that their language is hurtful, not humorous. Remind them they wouldn't make fun of someone with diabetes, heart disease or cancer.
- Be conscious of language: Avoid casual use of words like "crazy" or "nuts" to describe people.
- Be supportive and validating: If someone opens up to you about their mental health, listen, avoid judgement and don't offer unsolicited advice.

If you or a loved one is battling mental illness, please remember:

- You are not alone: An estimated 43.8 million U.S. adults have a mental illness in a given year, and about 17.3 million U.S. adults have had at least one major depressive episode.
- Treatment can be effective, but can take time: Prescription medications and talk therapy successfully help many individuals with mental illness. However, treatment is often trial and error at first. There is no one-size-fits-all approach.
- Seek support and interaction: Whether it's you or a loved one who has a mental health condition, you may feel it's easier to isolate and avoid others, but you deserve support.

Visit HorizonBlue.com/doctorfinder to find in-network doctors and hospitals so you can get the care you need when you need it.

NJWELL is an incentive-based wellness program offered to active employees and their covered spouses who participate in the SHBP/SEHBP. More detail can be found on http://www.nj.gov/njwell/. Preventive care services and screenings NJWELL are only covered when rendered by an in-network doctor or other health care professional. Immunizations received for travel outside the country or for work-related reasons are not covered. Well-child immunizations for children less than 12 months of age are the only immunizations allowed out-of-network.

Sources: National Alliance on Mental Health, National Institute of Mental Health, WebMD®

This information has been created and supplied to you courtesy of Horizon Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Jersey.